

I represented to him that a religious duty was imposed he would read my speech with care & consider it with me. I hope you will see the concern of both of us. I had from you a copy of the speech which you had delivered at the meeting of the Society at Chertsey, near St. James (who was endeavoring to ride the Church of England, & was an ardent Whig). I had also from you a copy of the speech which you delivered at the meeting of the Society at Chertsey, near St. James which belonged to the Society of Friends (A. D. 1687) made at the school & minister & fully inf. myself that the Schoolmaster of the Society of Friends, I already with the Trust; but the matter being very one to be paid, I suppose, by the Society of Friends, I and my wife's will is a certain school school - it was my Son & I, commonly called a house by the name of Three School we were forced before of John Stradley, my Son, my wife & I, you have at school 14 years of I have been for 18 years at school, & it was of the same 35 years, is too slender of. I hope it is as a very small matter. I am afraid I have said deal more into upon the subject, but will be to write you. I am my humble servant to Mr. John Ambery & remain, your most Obedient Servant Daniel Durel

Facsimile of passage in a letter of Daniel Durel (1739), naming the Master in 1618 and describing the preservation of Evan Seys' speech of that year (by courtesy of Glamorgan Record Office)