St. Canna, Llangan

A hidden gem on the edge of the lovely rural Vale of Glamorgan, changing little since the 12th century. Over the south porch stands a statue of the Virgin Mary, inside the porch lie the remains of the original Sutton stone font. In the chancel are three stained glass windows. The centre depicts the Ascension of Our Lord and is flanked on one side by St. Canna and on the other by David Jones, the minister famously referred to as 'the Angel of Llangan,' who preached here at the end of the 18th Century.

St Cadoc's Llanccarfan

The church of St. Cadoc, Llanccarfan, is the focus of a hidden & charming village, minutes from the Severn, 7 miles from fruitful Cowbridge.

St. Cadoc's pastoral call echoes well beyond regular worshippers. The church inherits a 6th century monastic tradition, when Llanccarfan flourished with learning. Iolo Morgannwg was born up the hill too, his explorations rewarding both historians & mythologists! Hidden to Iolo, now re-discovered after 450 years, are remarkable mediaeval wall-paintings, still revealing their secrets as conservation continues. Discover too Llanccarfan itself, interweaving church & pub, ancient relics, healing springs and rural delights. From celebration to bell-ringing, from getting married to genealogical quest, St. Cadoc's welcomes all.

St Curig's Church, Porthkerry

St Curig's Church in Porthkerry is situated in the heart of the hamlet with a footpath leading to Porthkerry Park. A church has been on the present site since the 13th century, part of the church building dating back to that time, with the tower being added later, in the 16th century.

The tower houses 6 bells, unusual for a church the size of St Curig's and two of them date back to the 16th century. A cross, believed to be pre-Reformation stands in the churchyard, though sadly damaged. Porthkerry's coastal location led to the churchyard being used in the past as a burial ground for casualties of the treacherous waters of the Bristol Channel. There are gravestones for three unknown sailors in the churchyard. St Curig's church was visited by John Wesley on three occasions when he preached in this area. He was a friend of the then inhabitants of Fonmon Castle and stayed both there and at the Dowager House of the estate (now the Fontygary Inn).

St Tathan, St Athan

This Grade 1 listed building is dedicated to the Celtic saint Tathan who founded a church on this site in the 6th Century.

The present building is of a cruciform plan in the decorated style of architecture of the 14th century with a central tower containing six bells. It has many interesting features including Crusader Tombs, a carving by Iolo Morgannwg, the deviser of the Gorsedd Ceremony of the National Eisteddfod of Wales and a memorial to John Williams, a famous Welsh Hymn writer.

St. Michael's and All Angels Church

St. Michael's Church lies in a small valley in the Hamlet of Llanmihangel which is equidistant between the historic town of Llantwit Major to the south, and the market town of Cowbridge to the east.

This Medieval Church was first noted in 1254 and to this day does not have any electricity, the only form of lighting being oil lamps. It is situated opposite Llanmihangel Plas, a Tudor Mansion that has featured in the television programme 'Houses in Wales'.

Ewenny Priory Church

"the most atmospheric Romanesque space in Wales" (T J Hughes Wales's Best One Hundred Churches)

Ewenny Priory is the most complete and impressive Norman church in South Wales and one of the finest examples of a fortified church building in Europe. It was completed by 1126; in 1141 it became a Priory of the Benedictine Abbey of St Peter, Gloucester.

The nave of the Priory, with its rounded arches and thick pillars, is in use as the parish church.

The Pulpitum Screen, dividing the two parts of the church, is the work of Alexander Beleschenko, and was installed in July 2006. The eastern or monastic end contains the tombs of the de Londres family, a medieval altar and a reproduction of the watercolour of the Priory painted by J.P.W. Turner in 1795. Much of the Priory's outer defensive walls and towers remain. Not only did they protect the Priory, but played a part in the Norman subjection of South Wales.

St Michael and All Angels, Colwinston

Agatha Christie association, Wall-painting, 'Thankful parish', good modern glass, pre-Reformation bell

A grade 1 listed building in lovely village setting. Built 13th century although the location may be that of an earlier Christian church with its southerly, sunny aspect, inconspicuous location in a little valley watered by a stream. Memorial in chancel to Major Hubert de Burgh Prichard, killed in Normandy, 1944. Son-in-law to Dame Agatha Christie. Narrative wall-painting by chancel arch. Unique in Glamorgan it tells the story of St Nicholas and the baby in the bath. Modern stained-glass by John Petts in nave window. 'Thankful village' one of 51 in England and Wales which received back all those they sent to fight in the Great War 1914-18. The bell is by John Goscelin of Bristol and is one of the 5% of pre-Reformation bells in Britain.

St Bridget's Church, St Brides Major

St Bridget of Kildare, one of the three major saints of Ireland, is said to have visited here in the 6th century, en route to Glastonbury, and founded a Christian community.

The Norman origins of St Bridget's Church are seen in the round-headed chancel and porch arches. The church was rebuilt in the 14th century and heavily restored in 1851.

Of particular interest are the monuments in the chancel to the Butler and Wyndham families. A 13th century incised slab shows Sir John le Botiler in full armour; a 16th century tomb-chest of John and Jane Butler has the couple lying recumbent, he in armour, with their children as 'weepers' shown on the side.

St. Donat's

Nestling in the woods at the foot of the castle walls, this essentially medieval church is rich in antiquity and very much alive today.

Among its congregation are staff and students from the international Atlantic College who bring a mix of cultures from across the Christian world. In the church yard is a rare, intact Medieval calvary.

St Mary, Monkash

Although much restored, St Mary's church forms a typical complete Norman church of the 12th century, with the chancel arch and a window dating from that time.

Some of the beams are "reputed" to have come from remains of the armada which were washed up on the nearby beaches! The church belonged to Neath Abbey, with the monastic grange and dovecote remaining in the village near the Plough and Harrow.

Holy Cross - Parish Church

Holy Cross can be found at the heart of the medieval streets of Cowbridge and although the fabric of the building has been added to over the years, it is its large buttressed tower that surprises most visitors. Why was it built?

Its white rendering appears stark against the traditional grey of the rest of the stonework and as the tower is crowned by an eight-sided parapet, it looks fortified - but is it misleading?

Holy Cross was not a grand defensive structure and in fact, began life as a 'church of ease', acting as a minor place of worship to the larger parish of Llanblethian.

Edward Lhwyd, appointed Keeper of the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford in 1690, journeyed through Wales and noted that it was believed that at around 1480, the Tower of Cowbridge was struck by lightning which incinerated the spire.

The spire was believed to have been made of a framing of wood covered with lead. If there was once such a spire, the Tower would have had a very different appearance.

St Tydfil's, Llysworney

Unusual ground plan, pre-Reformation bell, pretty village setting with pond. Unknown to those who rush by on the main road through the village.

A central tower is unusual in the Vale. The offset tower arches make a view of the altar a real difficulty. Why was this built thus? The bell is by John Goscelin of Bristol and is one of the 5% of pre-Reformation bells in Britain. The former School House stands to the south. The church is beautifully sited above the village pond. The pond never dries up. Dramatically floodlit on occasion.

St Giles, Gileston

This beautiful, small, church, nestling alongside the Georgian style manor house (in private ownership), dates from the 15th Century. It is suggested an earlier church was dedicated to St. Mabon leading one to believe that a considerably older church once stood here.

Coincidentally, the Giles family held the manor in 1350 and gave their name to the village and the church became dedicated to St. Giles. Giles family graves may be found in the pretty church yard. The south door is unique showing six carved shields and is some 530 years old

St Mary the Virgin, Bonvilston

A church dedicated to Saint Mary has stood on this site from the 12th Century.

The first incumbent is recorded as being in the parish in 1189.

The present church, rebuilt in 1863, is typical Victorian Gothic, with only the tower and the chancel arch remaining from the original Norman structure. Items of interest include a 13th Century font and a stone plaque depicting - ? - well, we are not sure really. Its a mystery! The east window is worth a visit at least.
