Mary, This is Ann Williams, co-chair of site team at San Jose, we are working at finding a suitable room for the eisteddfod preliminaries. We have one reserved but would like to know if you have any idea of the audience size. On the summary sheet given to us by Ellis dated June 12 there are 35 people registered but we are wondering if there is any way to differentiate between those audience members registered for the preliminaries and for the finals. The room we have for the finals is very large and there is no problem with the number in audience but the preliminary room we have in mind will hold just 28. We need to change this room if the audience is large on the Friday. Does my request seem clear - and is there a way to differentiate. Thanks Ann

Ann: Mary has given me a copy of your e-mail about the number of persons to expect for the preliminaries for the Eisteddfod. As of Registration No. 412 (as of July 12), 66 persons have now indicated that they want to attend the Eisteddfod as spectators. Therefore, I'm assuming since we're expect 200 to 300 more registrations within the next four weeks, that it would be wise to plan for at least 100 for the preliminaries.

Ann,

I just had Ellis reply to one of the questions you asked regarding the number of persons to expect for the Eisteddfod preliminaries.

Regarding the other matter: no, there is no way to differentiate between those audience members registered for the preliminaries and for the finals as there is only one fee charged for both sessions. Sorry to make more work for you.

All for now,
Mary
